Ruskin's Home

Three miles away from the village of Coniston, and on the opposite side of the lake, lies Brantwood, the home of Professor Ruskin—a large, beautiful, rambling house, with spa-cious rooms and low ceilings, com-manding a view which is certainly unsurpassed in England for pictures queness and poetic beauty. Down the grassy slopes and across the placid, mirror-like lake the spectator looks up at the "Old Man of Coniston," rising majestically from among the lesser hills which form the middle distance. The village lies away to the right on the opposite shore; to the left no habitation interrupts the view for four miles and more, save the ivy-grown Coniston hall. On such a picture, rich with ever-vary-ing color, fascinating and peaceful, the great art critic loves to gaze throughout the summer twenty times Mr. Ruskin was walking in the extensive grounds adjoining the house when I arrived, and pending the announcement of my visit I was shown into the drawing-room to await his coming. Dwarf and other book-cases stood against the walls, which, moreover, were adorned with beauti-ful examples of Prout, D. G. Rosetti, and others, as well as Mr Ruskin's well-known drawing of the interior of St. Mark's at Venice, one of his most important efforts. Cases of shells in infinite variety, and of minerals, revealed another and less generally known phase of Mr. Rus-kin's taste, and a volume of "Art in England"-his last series of Oxford lectures-lay upon the table. I was still examining the handsome bindings upon the shelves (for the profes-sor delights in worthy examples of the book-binder's art) when the door opened and he entered the room.

With his usual genial smile and engaging manner he said, "I am very engaging manner he said, 'I am very glad to see you; I wish you hadn't come to-day, though." I was pre-paring to offer apologies, when he continued: "It was beautifully bright and clear yesterday and the view was perfect. To-day it is very black and you can see nothing. But come with me into the library; we can talk better there and see better, too, if the sun will only shine."

And he preceded me into a chamber which was enriched by even a greater profusion of works of art than the one I had just left. Numerous ex-quisite water colors of Turner hung around the room, a marvelous ex-ample of Lucca della Robia's faience ("fashioned by the master's own hand and absolutely perfect," Mr. Ruskin said), decorated the chimney piece, book-cases and drawers full of minerals lined the room, and beautiful books were scattered about in artistic confusion .- [Pall Mall Ga-

The vast mass of all we learn comes to us through print. Most of our ideas of life, what we imagine to be our own experiences, are, in truth, assimilated and adopted from the books we read, for the books are the expression of our collective lives, and a constant current of ebb and flow goes on between the heart and mind of a nation and its literature. We make our books and our books make us.-Providence Journal.

Cure For Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the natient to suppose he has some effection of the kidneys or neighboring organs, At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uncasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspir-ation, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a com mon attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the appli-cation of Dr. Bosanko's Pile remedy. cation of Dr. Bosanko's Pile remedy, which acts directly upon the parts effected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure. Young lady just returned from Saratoga (to friend): "We saw a great deal of that young Mr. Algernon de Courcey at Saratoga, Clara He is delightful. He paid me specia attention. Have you ever met him?" Clara (quietly): "O yes. Algernon wrote me that he had been polite to you en my account."

Tired and Languid Women.

How many women, there are o whom these words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their feet, the bloom all gone from their cheeks, irratable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with go scute disease." What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.

Athletic sports may now be said to form part of the course of education in all schools and colleges. There is danger, however, that they may sometimes be indulged in to a hurtful degree, and experienced athletes always counteract the effects of severe training by thorough applications of St. Jacobs Oil.
